

European asset managers lead the way in operational risk management

According to a new survey of asset managers performed by Ernst & Young, European operational risk management systems are more mature than those at work in US based firms

August 15 (HedgeWorld): According to a new survey of a