

Shareholder activism still rare among mutual funds

With hedge funds embracing the opportunity to become shareholder activist, the same practice remains rare with mutual funds, for cultural and structural reasons.

January 15 (New York Times): While shareholder activism may be