

Central banks intervene over credit crisis

European and North American banks have made a co-ordinated move to try and end the credit squeeze in global financial markets.